Homsher

Photographs, 1967, Photographs of the Fairbanks flood of 1967, both ground and aerial views.

Donated. Homsher, Lola.

74 Photos.

In August 1967, the Chena River flooded its banks, causing massive flooding in the city of Fairbanks. Heavy rains caused the banks of the Chena and Little Chena River to raise six feet above their flood levels. The city was declared a national disaster area, with utilities out and bridges and roads washed away. Damage to Fairbanks and its outlying areas totaled over $80 million. The flood inspired the Chena River Lakes Flood Project, with the purpose of the project to protect both Fairbanks and Fort Wainwright from further flooding.

Scope and Contents

The Homsher Collection consists of photographs of the 1967 Fairbanks flood. The flood scenes include both aerial and ground views of Fairbanks. There are several photographs of residential areas including homes, trailers, and apartments. There are photographs of the Lathrop High School, downtown, the State building, federal building, Post Office, Jail, Cushman Street, Bassett Hospital at Ft. Wainwright, and several other photographs of Ft. Wainwright. In the collection there are photographs of the Nenana River and bridge, Railroad tracks and barges, airplane hangers and planes, and Alaskaland. Also of note are photographs of a woman exiting a plane after being rescued by the Airforce, and of a man being lifted from his roof. The collection is arranged in number order.

This collection was donated to the Anchorage Museum by Lola Homsher in December 1970.
