COLLECTION NUMBER: B2014.001

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLECTION

Dates: circa 1959-2013

Extent: 2.8 linear feet; 3 boxes

Language and Scripts: The collection is in English.

Name of creator(s): Louise Gallop, Ed Cooper

Administrative/Biographical History:

Louise Gallop was born in New York on November 6, 1922. In 1953, she began teaching in Queens, New York. She first came to Alaska on vacation in 1959, and relocated to Alaska permanently in 1961. She taught at Rabbit Creek Elementary School in Anchorage until her retirement in 1979.

In 1960, Louise stayed at Camp Denali, a wilderness lodge located near Kantishna, and later joined the summer staff as a cook. She became interested in gold panning, and purchased a gold claim on Friday Creek in the Kantishna District, near the site of Fannie Quigley's historic claim. Known as "Kantishna Lou," she brought Camp guests to the creek and showed them how to pan. In 1982 and 1983, she had her claim mined professionally, living in a small cabin on the property. In 1995, Louise's claim was bought out by the National Park Service. Her cabin, now used by rangers and researchers, is still known as the Gallop Cabin.

She was a published poet and author and encouraged poetry among school children, selecting and editing poems for the Pencils Full of Stars series produced by the Anchorage School

District. She was a docent and volunteer at the Anchorage Museum for over 30 years, and also worked in the museum shop. Louise died on August 6, 2013.¹
