TITLE: Adak Historical Society Collection

COLLECTION NUMBER: B1996.035

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLECTION

Dates: 1933-1934, 1942-1996

Extent: 38 boxes; 31.5 linear feet

Language and Scripts: The collection is in English.

Name of creator: Adak Historical Society

Administrative/Biographical History:

The U.S. military base on Adak Island began its existence on August 28, 1942 when American submarines delivered an Army scouting party to determine whether Japanese military forces were present. The Japanese had attacked Dutch Harbor/Unalaska from the air two months earlier and then occupied Attu and Kiska Islands, further to the west. On August 30th, 4500 troops and tons of heavy equipment were landed on Adak from seventeen ships and construction of temporary, and then permanent, facilities was begun. At first Adak was under the control of the Army. A shallow lagoon off Kuluk Bay was drained and a Marston mat aircraft runway was serviceable within weeks, allowing Army Air Corps bombers to take off for attacks on Kiska and Attu. At the same time, Navy operations were centered on the east side of Lake Andrew where amphibious PBY aircraft departed for surveillance and bombing operations.
Until Adak was occupied, operations against the Japanese had come from the Umnak Island airfield near Dutch Harbor/Unalaska 300 miles to the east. Flights from Adak were shorter, more effective, and safer.

In May 1943 about 27,000 combat troops gathered at Adak ready to support the invasion of Attu. After three weeks of bloody fighting, the Japanese forces were defeated. In August 1943, an invasion force of 90,000 troops was staged on Adak to launch amphibious attacks on Attu and Kiska. More than 100 ships were in the harbor. On August 15 the invasion force landed on Kiska only to discover that the Japanese had evacuated under the cover of fog. Thereafter, the Aleutian Islands remained under Allied control. Although this was the end of combat in the Aleutians, development of Adak’s infrastructure continued. Adak’s role was to support operations at newer bases further to the west; the island was also used to launch raids against the Japanese in the Kurile Islands. Adak became the largest military base in the Aleutians with facilities to accommodate 50,000 men.¹

In 1948 the Adak base changed from Army to Air Force control, and in 1950 the Navy took control. Rising concerns over Soviet military power during the Cold War led to expansion of facilities and operations, including submarine surveillance; at its peak the station housed 6000 Navy personnel and their families. Support facilities included theaters, churches, elementary and high schools, a bowling alley, a library, a swimming pool, and a MacDonald’s restaurant. Adak remained under Navy control until the Adak Naval Air Station was decommissioned on March 31, 1997.

Ownership of the facilities passed to the Aleut/Pribilof Native Corporation and the City of Adak, which have worked to reconfigure Adak into a support base for commercial fishing operations in the Aleutians. In 2001 Adak organized as a second-class city and currently (2017) has a population of about 100-300. The southern half of the island is administered by the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge.²

ADMINISTRATIVE INFORMATION

Acquisition and Appraisal Information
The Adak Community Museum, which housed the collections of the Adak Historical Society, was established in 1976 (see accession file). The Anchorage Museum was contacted in 1996 and the archivist and curator of collections travelled to Adak. They selected documents, photographs, and artifacts which were then transferred to Anchorage.

Processing Notes
Eleven 5 ¼ inch computer floppy disks containing internal museum administrative data or computer programs were discarded.

Particularly interesting images have been marked in this guide with an asterisk.

Box 34

Scrapbook measuring 11 inches by 14 inches, containing 88 color photos, two baggage tags, a postcard, and two travel brochures. Many photos have lengthy captions.

The reunion commemorated the “40th Anniversary of the Air Force in Alaska.” Scrapbook was assembled by Laurence Reineke (see Box 5, Folder 4, as well as audio cassette and VHS tapes in Series 12 for more by him in this collection). According to a note on page 1, this scrapbook was donated to the Adak Historical Society on June 14, 1991.
Cover: Stiff paper with colored pencil caption: “Remembered Front / Alaska / Aleutians / Aug. 1980” and cartoons of two scowling hornets, one carrying a red bomb and identified as the 21st Bomb Squad insignia, the other smoking a pipe and looking for clues through a magnifying glass and identified as “Intelligence 21 B.S.”

Tape 7—“REINEKE ALEUTIAN VCR #1
   rec’d from Al McRae, radio operator with 21 Bomb Sqdn.
   “first part of the video tape is the Watson 16mm movies that I put on
   VCR. Umnak & Adak”
   “the movie segment on the combat mission over Kiska was filmed from Hamilton’s airplane.”
   (See: Roger Vance letters in Reineke Aleutian Book 2)
McRae concludes this VCR with the battle of Okinawa (Extra bonus?)
B29s were diverted from bombing main islands of Japan and sent to airfields in Kyushu to bomb. Didn’t do much good. Japs just filled the holes and planes took off. As you know it was a “one-way” mission. L. Reineke 5/28/91”
Tape 8—“Berry & Holzmiller Albums, 1942-43, 18th Engineers”
Loose label in case has following description which probably describes a different videotape:
“REINEKE ALEUTIAN VCR #2
PBY recovery from Dago Lake
Return to crash site on Atka, WW2
1980 11th AF Reunion at Adak
(This is not professional work . . . long pauses, but keep with it. For detailed information on return to crash site see Aleut Expedition #6 and explanation of 1980 reunion, these will be in Aleutian Book 2, under VCR.)”
