TITLE: Eklutna and Anvik Collection

COLLECTION NUMBER: B2019.003

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLECTION

Dates: circa 1929

Extent: 1 box; 2.2 linear feet

Language and Scripts: The collection is in English.

Name of creator(s): unknown

Administrative/Biographical History:

Excerpted from the seller's catalog:

"A collection of photographs documenting two Alaska towns: Anvik and Eklutna, possibly compiled by a female missionary for the Christ Church Mission in Anvik. [Cataloger's note: the photographer is likely one of the two women shown in the photos on Sheet 6, "Scenes from Cook's Inlet".]

At least 31 photos depict Anvik, a tiny Athabascan village along the Yukon River, with most of those showing the Christ Church Mission. In 1887, the Reverends John Chapman and Octavius Parker of the American Episcopal Church started the mission. According to its application for placement in the National Register of Historic Places, "Christ Church Mission was one of the most significant Native educational, medical and religious centers in all of Alaska during the long span of years before government began providing the welfare services." Its most important function was the education of village children, and over time it grew to accept students from villages up and down the Yukon River, as well as providing health services.

At least 47 photos show Eklutna. The village grew after the 1923 completion of the Alaska Railroad when the Bureau of Indian Affairs established an orphanage for Native American children. The orphanage was converted into a boarding school which became the Eklutna Industrial School. By the time of these photos, the school had around 110 students who came from all over Alaska. These students made up most of the village's population which showed 158 residents in the 1930 census (the approximate population today is 70)."

Scope and Content Description:

The collection consists of 147 black and white photographs mounted to 12 leaves of cardboard or construction paper measuring from 13" x 18½" to 13" x 24½", possibly for presentation. Photos measure from 2½" x 3½" to 3½" x 5¾". Also included are a Christmas card and 3 pieces of ephemera. For more information, see Detailed Description of Collection.
