Name of creator(s): Virginia (Smith) Sherwood; Nathan L. Smith

Administrative/Biographical History:

Virginia (Smith) Sherwood was born in Gambell, Alaska. Her father, Nathan L. Smith, was a schoolteacher in Alaska in the 1930s and early 1940s. The Smith family lived in Eklutna, Alaska from fall 1939-June 1941, where Nathan Smith was the radio and shop teacher at the Eklutna Vocational School. Mr. Smith was an amateur photographer, and he photographed people and their activities in the communities where he lived. Mr. Smith took most of the photographs included in this collection.

The Department of Interior's Bureau of Education built the Eklutna Vocational School in 1924 to house and educate children orphaned by the 1918 influenza epidemic in Alaska. A fish camp was also built and maintained by the school to provide training in subsistence fishing and to help provide food for the children. Courses at the school were mainly vocational training classes. By 1930, 110 students were enrolled at the school. In 1946, the school's buildings were condemned and the school was permanently closed.
