Ceceile Kay Richter Collection
B01.34

Ms. Richter worked for both the US Army Corps of engineers and one of the contractors on the project to survey former military sites prior to cleanup under ERDA (Environmental Restoration Defense Account) in the 1980's. This collection consists of some general files on the program; a file containing information regarding Ms. Richter's background and participation in the project; files listing airfields, naval construction, weather stations, White Alice sites, Department of Defense (DoD) priorities; files containing ownership information about some of the sites; and a copy of a paper given by Lyman Woodman on German POWs in Alaska.

There are also files giving information needed for the military cleanup survey about a number of specific sites, including Barrow, Fairbanks, Hoonah, Juneau, Ketchikan, Kodiak, Port Heiden, Port Moller, Seward, Skagway, Sitka, and Whittier. Area files are included for the Aleutian Islands, Northern sites, and Other sites.

DERP (the Defense Environmental Restoration Program) was created by the US Congress in December 1983 for the purpose of funding/arranging the cleanup of former DoD sites that had been contaminated during use. Unused buildings, hazardous waste, and other relics of the WWII and Korean War military buildups in Alaska were eliminated under DERP. Most work under DERP was done by civilian contractors working under supervision from the Army Corps of Engineers. See folder 4, (ERDA General) for more general information about DERP and the cleanup of former military sites in Alaska.

The following is a list of the files in the Richter collection, with a description of each.

Airfield list June 1945-
