TITLE: William Zeddies, Sr., Slides

COLLECTION NUMBER: B2011.009

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLECTION

Dates: ca. 1966-1971

Extent: 93 slides

Language and Scripts: The collection is in English.

Name of creator(s): William Zeddies, Sr.

Administrative/Biographical History:
William (Bill) Zeddies, Sr., was born Oct. 23, 1923, and raised in Mishicot, WI. He attended Mishicot High School and worked on a family farm. He left Mishicot to work as a logger and a railroad fireman on steam engines before returning home to finish school. During World War II, he served on a ground crew for bombers. He learned welding and went to work building ships in Florida. He opened and operated Steel Erection Co. He moved to Alaska in 1960 and worked as a maintenance foreman on Distant Early Warning sites from 1966-1971. He was married to Marge Stone. He died Feb. 7, 1993.

The Distant Early Warning Line, also known as the DEW Line or Early Warning Line, was a system of radar stations in the Canada Arctic, with additional stations along the North Coast and Aleutian Islands of Alaska, in addition to the Faroe Islands, Greenland, and Iceland. It was set up to detect incoming Soviet bombers during the Cold War, and provide early warning of a land based invasion.¹

Scope and Content Description:
The collection consists of 93 color slides depicting Distant Early Warning sites in Alaska during the period circa 1966-1971.

Arrangement:
Original order of carousel maintained.
