Administrative/Biographical History:

Peggy Farmer Mullins (1907-1993) came to Alaska in 1939. During her time in the state, she was involved in a number of businesses, including the Tatalina Lodge and Farmer Trucking in Fairbanks. After the death of her husband Arlie, Peggy moved to Anchorage, where she operated Ace Realty until her retirement in 1975.

Construction of the military station at Tatalina was begun in 1950 and completed in 1952. The 717th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron originally operated the station as a Ground Control Intercept (GCI) and warning station. It was activated as a White Alice Communications System site in 1957. The station was deactivated in 1979.

There are several slides of Anchorage and Fairbanks, as well as a few other
