Administrative/Biographical History:
The M/V Health was a “floating clinic,” a marine unit of the Alaska Department of Health. The program was created to facilitate the battle against tuberculosis in Alaska after World War II. The M/V Health, along with the M/S Hygiene, were mobile health units that allowed medical professionals to treat rural Alaskans in their villages. The two ships serviced the coastlines of Alaska, from the Aleutian Islands to as far north as Point Hope.

Scope and Content Description:
The collection consists of 151 35mm color slides taken by Jeanne Schaver and her colleagues during service aboard the M/V Health in the 1950s. Most of the images depict rural village life and clinic operations. For more information, see Detailed Description of Collection.

Arrangement: Loosely arranged by location.
