Scope and Contents

General Adolphus W. Greely, 1844-1935, born in Newburyport, Massachusetts fought in the Civil War from 1861-65. He was the first volunteer private soldier of the Civil War to reach the grade of Brigadier General. He served in the Canadian Arctic as part of the International Polar Expedition, 1881-1883, at Barrow, and as Chief Signal Officer made five trips between 1900-1910 to Alaska to inspect Wamcats under construction by the Army Signal Corps. There are ten photos of the International Polar Expedition, and twenty-three photos taken by the Miles Brothers of Greely's inspection trips. Photographs of the Polar Expedition include photos of the U.S. Signal Station at Barrow, Scenes of Ooglaamie as well as of natives of Ooglaamie, and of Ice scenes. Photographs of Greely's inspection trips include several photos of various towns, including Sitka, Valdez, and Eagle City. There are also photographs of the ship, St. Michael, Camp Comfort, Touke Salmon Cannery, and of the Interior of a Governor's Residence. Photographers of the collection include Miles Brothers and Adams S. Larkin. The collection is arranged in number order. Please see photo list for specific photograph information.
