TITLE: Henry G. Bryant Album

COLLECTION NUMBER: B2006.012

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLECTION

Dates: 1897-1903

Extent: 1.5 linear feet

Language and Scripts: The collection is in English.

Name of creator(s): Henry Grier Bryant (1859-1932), Eric A. Hegg

Administrative/Biographical History:

Although there is no direct evidence that this album was compiled by Henry Bryant there are strong connections, including stock certificates made out to him and correspondence received by him.

Henry Grier Bryant was born in Pennsylvania; his father had made a fortune in leather and lumber. He was educated at Phillips Exeter Academy, Princeton University, and the University of Pennsylvania Law School and lived most of his life in Philadelphia. He became an explorer, photographer, and member of the international geographical community, travelling to Labrador in 1891 and to Greenland on the Peary Relief Expedition in 1892. Bryant organized an expedition to climb Mt. St. Elias in Alaska in 1897. A member of his party was injured during the climb, ending the attempt. (In the same year an Italian team led by Prince Luigi Amedeo, Duke of the Abruzzi, was the first to complete the ascent). In 1899 Bryant led an expedition on Mount Assiniboine, Alberta, Canada, in the company of Englishman L. J. Steele. Later explorations included the St. Augustine River in Labrador and mountain ascents throughout the world. He was president of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia for various terms between 1897 and 1932 and president of the American Alpine Club from 1911-13. There is a collection of Bryant's papers and photographs at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and a collection of his travel notebooks (not including Alaska) is at the Independence Seaport Museum, Philadelphia.

The amount of detail in the album's captions (mileage on the Chilkoot Trail, elevation of mountains) indicates first-hand knowledge and implies that the photographer and album's compiler were the same person. However, the handwriting in the captions is clumsy and some common words are misspelled (summitt for summit, paridice for paradise, peek for peak). This does not seem to be the work of a wealthy, highly educated man. Photographs of Stoney Indians and of Mont Blanc have "LJ Steele" penciled on their backs in a different style of handwriting, further obscuring the album's origins. (The New York Times reported on July 16, 1899 that Bryant was leaving to attempt a climb of Mount Assiniboine in Canada, so the Rocky Mountain and Stoney Indian photos in the album are probably from that trip.)

Scope and Content Description:

The collection consists of 76 black and white photographs, most in fair to poor condition, plus ephemera including brochures, stock certificates, correspondence, and a newspaper clipping. Most of the photographs depict the Chilkoot Trail in the spring of 1898 at the height of the Klondike Gold Rush. There are also mountaineering photos taken in the Canadian Rockies and on Mont Blanc in Europe, as well as some fine Indian portraits taken of Stoney (Nakoda) Indians in Alberta, Canada. Many of the photos have penciled captions beneath them or on their backs. The photos of Canadian Stoney Indians have "LJ Steele" penciled on their backs—was he the photographer? At least one of the gold rush photos is a copy of a well-known image by Seattle photographer E. A. Hegg (image .4). Another image, .14, has been published and credited to the Seattle Historical Society.
