Name of creator(s): Eugene Tetinek

Administrative/Biographical History:

Eugene Joseph Tetinek was born June 27, 1905, in Bern, Switzerland. He immigrated to Ohio in 1912, and in 1932 he traveled to Alaska in search of work. He spent two years in Fort Yukon, then moved to the Marshall area to work in the mining industry, mostly with the Fairbanks Exploration Company in the Willow Creek area. He briefly lived in Mountain Village, and worked as a janitor at the hospital there. From 1946-1956 he lived in Russian Mission. During World War II, he served with the 10th Air Force Rescue Squadron. In 1956, he again moved to Marshall where he operated a grocery store. In 1980, he relocated to Anchorage. Tetinek died March 8, 1996.

The 10th Air Rescue Squadron (ARS), organized at Elmendorf Field in 1946 and mostly manned by Alaskans, had inherited the tradition of the 924th Quartermaster Company, Boat (Aviation), a rescue unit which was constituted in Alaska on 14 June 1942, saw action during the Aleutian Island Campaign, was redesignated the 10th Emergency Rescue Boat Squadron on 3 July 1944, and was inactivated on 8 March 1946. During the late 1940s and early 1950s, the 10th ARS operated detachments at Elmendorf AFB, Ladd AFB and Adak Naval Station. The squadron operated a mixture of OA-10s, OA-12s, SB-17 Flying Fortress, C-45s, L-5s, LC-126As, R-5 Helicopters and CG-4 Gliders.<sup>1</sup>

A C-47A (43-15788), assigned to Northwest Airlines, crashed 17 miles east-northeast of Mt. McKinley into the side of Mt. Deception, killing all 19 aboard. Northwest Airlines pilot, Capt. Roy Proebstle and First Officer Lauren M. Blivens served as crew members along with Army PFC James A. George, steward. The C-47 was approximately 35 miles off course en route from Anchorage to Fairbanks with sixteen passengers aboard, including one civilian, who were heading for leave in the states after service in the Aleutians. Captain Proebstle and his crew took off at 1604 on a regularly scheduled flight with stops in Fairbanks, Edmonton and Minneapolis. They submitted their last report over Talkeetna. The crew apparently was flying at 12,000 feet when they encountered a severe downdraft, which forced them to go on instruments into the clouds. The C-47 hit belly first with the fuselage splitting open, then caromed down a precipitous slope coming to rest a third of a mile down from the point of impact. It took 53 days for a rescue team to reach the site, traveling by snow jeeps and sleds, resupplied by air drops by another C-47 Gooney Bird. The authorities decided not to recover the casualties because of avalanches dangers and the rugged surrounding area.<sup>2</sup>

Scope and Content Description:

The collection consists of 2139 mostly black-and-white 35mm nitrate negatives (only .1.1-.1.10 in color) and 138 black-and-white prints of photographs taken by Eugene Tetinek circa 1932-1956. A significant number of photographs document activities of the Army Air Force 10th Air Rescue Group, particularly the rescue mission at Mount McKinley to recover the wreckage of a crashed C-47. Topics of the photographs include military and civilian aviation, fishing, mining, dogs, surveying, fish processing, transportation, and rescue missions. Of particular note are a long series of images documenting winter fishing in Russian Mission and a shorter series documenting a Russian Orthodox funeral, also at Russian Mission. For more information, see Detailed Description of Collection.

Arrangement: Arranged by format. Images otherwise not arranged. Refer to contact sheets for physical relationship of sequentially numbered images. Copy negs filed at end of negative series.
