Administrative/Biographical History:
Leonard G. Thomas was working for J.B. Warrack Company on construction of the north tower of the Anchorage Westward Hotel at the time of the 1964 Good Friday Earthquake. An executive with the Alaska General Contractors Association, Thomas was tapped to lead AGCA and union workers in recovery and cleanup efforts. Leonard and his wife Geraldine were both amateur photographers. Leonard took Geraldine to the top of the Westward’s north tower on the day after the earthquake, and both took many photographs of Anchorage at that time and over the following months. Leonard was awarded the first Golden Hard Hat award from the AGCA for his work on earthquake recovery and reconstruction. He died in 1990. Geraldine died in 2002.

Scope and Content Description:
The collection consists of 89 black-and-white prints, 390 black-and-white negatives, and 3 color negatives, taken by Leonard and Geraldine Thomas. The images primarily depict the

There are also 11 photographs of construction projects under taken by J.B. Warrack Co. in the 1950s, including buildings for the military and the Alaska Railroad.
